FATE OF A BRIGHT SCHOOLBOY

Alfred Van Steenburgh Dies from a Target-Shooter's Bullet.

The Coroner Called Upon to Make

joying its annual outing in Eberhardt's

Park, in the next lot.

The Jaeger Association was spending the day in the usual fashion of such erganisations. There were games and feasting and beer drinking and joility. Among the sports was target shooting.

The range is back of the hotel, and consists of a shooting box, in which the marksman stands, and in front of it, 100 yards away, a target. The range is uncovered and guarded only by a low railing on either side.

Little Aifred, running about in sight of his fond mamma, tossing a rubber ball, once tossed it too far. It went over the rifle range fence, and the lad, all unconscious of the danger, climbed over the rail in pursuit of it.

Probably the man in the shooting box did not see the child at all. At any rate, there came the crack of the little rifle and then a scream from Aifred as he plunged forward upon the ground.

A dosen of the marksmen were bending over the little fellow when his over the little fellow when his plunged forward upon the ground.

A dosen of the marksmen were bending over the little fellow when his mother and William Sohn reached him.

He was unconscious and bleeding from a bullet wound on the side of the head, about two inches above the ear, but each of the marksmen declared in turn that he did not do the shooting, and nobody would tell who was in the box at the time Alfred fell.

Two neighboring physicians came.

was in the box at the time Alfred feil.

Two neighboring physicians came, and they found that the 32-calibre bullet had passed through the skull and was lodged against the brain.

It was just 4 o'clock. The Steenburghs returned hastily to their home. Dr. George R. Elliott, of 48 East Twenty-sixth street, was called, and he and Dr. Woodman worked over their little patient all night long and succeeded in relieving him a little, but to the grief-stricken parents the formal notice from the principal of Grammar School if of the honors little Alfred had achieved and how specimens of his work had been forwarded to the World's Fair as fine examples of the progress of the American schoolboy.

Mr. Van Stenburg went to the Health Office this morning to file the death certificate in the Bureau of Vital Statistics.

The certificate, however, was refused.

Mr. Van Steenburgh was directed ake it to the Coroner's office. was contended that the boy met death in a manner that certainly ted the rigid investigation which Coroner was able to give the matter.

FIRE ON A WORLD'S FAIR SPECIAL

Dining-Car, of the Massachusetts Delegation's Train Damaged. BUFFALO, June 13 .- A special train

fining and a baggage car arrived in o'clock this morning bearing the Massa chusetts delegation for the World's Pair, all but Governor and Mrs. Russell, who preceded them on Saturday. Just before reaching Rotterdam Junc-tion the dining car was observed to be on fire, the flames spreading rapidly to the roof. A stop was made a few miles beyond Rotterdam and the patent exthe roof. A stop was made a few miles beyond, Rotterdam and the patent extinguishers were used with good effect, although considerable damage was done and recourse was had to the waiting room at Syracuse for dinner. Another dining car was substituted there and the party went on rejoicing.

Massachusetts day is to be celebrated in the State Department of the World's Fair on June 17, being the anniversary of Bunker Hill.

AMERICAN BEEF IN MEXICO.

The Order Against Its Importation Likely to Be Modified.

KANSAS CITY, June 13.-A letter has been received here from ex-Gov. Crittenden, the newly appointed Consul-General to Mexico, stating that there seems to be cause for believing that the Mexican Government will withdraw or modify, the order recently proclaimed, forbidding the importation of beef, except on the hoof.

Minister Gray and Consul Crittenden recently held a conference with President Diaz and his Cabinet on the subject and received assurances that the matter would be carefully considered.
